SON
(A response)

Blessed of the gods, — Ceridwedd kissed thy brow; Joy of my youth, pride of declining years; Son, brother, friend, united in thee now, Will brace my soul's brain, dispel my fears. My simple self in thee shall live upon. A thousand times more brilliant and divine; Cleansed of the dross, bred in my bosoms of put, Ascend to ladder heights whilst I decline. Then from the blue serene turn to reflect How knaves and piggies wallow in the mire Of worldly pomp, deceit, and false faith. Of honour, — source of every base desire. Too flexible to bear, too proud to bend, Too dignified to fawn, — await the end.
